Rabbi Reynolds entertained a large audience at the Synogogue last evening in the third of his series of lectures on "Literature of the Prophets." In the course of his lecture he said that he regretted that so many of the younger Jewish people had accepted Shakespeare's Shylock as a type of the Jew-ish race and censured him for demanding a pound of flesh. He said that if the children were properly taught they would know that no such character as Shylock ever existed; that neither Shylock nor Jessica is a Jewish name, and Shakespeare knew little of the Jewish character when he wrote "The Merchant of Venice." Furthermore every imaginary pound of flesh the Jew has taken, the Christian nations have taken a read pound. In the inquisition alone 300,000 lives had been taken, and the speaker thought that the Jewish people should not feel so grieved over the imaginary pound of flesh that Shylock

JASON TINGEY'S TRAGIC DEATH.

Nine-Year-Old Boy Carried to His Death by an Excited Horse, Which Dashed in Front of a Locomotive.

(Special to the "News.") Centerville, May 18 .- The people of this town have been cast into a heavy gloom by the tragic death of Jason Tingey, the 9-year-old son of Thomas and Thirza Tingey, which occurred here at about 8 o'clock this morning. Jason and three companions had driven some of the railroad track, and were returning home, all of them being on horseback. It is believed that they were running races, when within about 200 yards of the track the boys discovered that a train was coming. The three older boys checked their horses but the animal that Jason rode was excited over the run that it had been put through and kept on at full speed to-wards the track. The boys yelled and screamed, and Jason tugged at the bit, but the animal was wild with excite-ment and kept right on, carrying the boy to his frightful death. Fate seemed have been drawing the boy and the train together, and they met simultaneously on the crossing in the lane. Jasor has hurled forward about five rods, and when found the back of his head had been torn open, and one of his legs was mutilated. He must have been killed instantly. The horse was caught on the pilot of the engine and carried about 500 yards. It was also killed.

The boys that were with Jason were transfixed with horror, and were unble to tell a very connected story o the boy's awful fate. The entire town is in mourning, and the mother is distracted. Jason was her only child, and her grief is such as is only felt by mothers similarly bereaved.

The funeral will be held probably on Monday from the meeting house

NIGHTWATCHMAN DIES WHILE ON DUTY.

George Sheppard, an Employe of the Dinwoodey Furniture Company, Succumbs to Heart Disease-Found Dead In the Store This Morning.

Nightwatchman George Sheppard, messengers to Sheppard's home to inaged 73 years, of the Dinwoodey furniture store, was found dead at his post about 7:20 this morning. He had been employed at Dinwoody's for over thirty years, and resided at 87 Plum street, in the Nineteenth ward. His lifeless body was first discovered by Rupolph Pruhs, an upholstrer. When Mr. Pruhs went to the store this morning he was surprised to find the front and rear doors locked. He hammered on the rear door for about ten minutes thinking that perhaps the old watchman was attending to some duty in another part of the building. Finally he became alarmed, and climbing up the fire escape gained entrance to the building on the second floor. He called for the watchman several times but received no answer then went down to

As he approached the office he was horrified to find the watchman lying with his face on the floor and his feet and legs on the edge of the chalr in which he had been sitting. His heels were caught in the desk which prevented him from falling at full length. the desk was the old man's handker-chief, a tin box half full of composition powder and a tin cup containing water. The electric light was burning and a ledger had been placed upright to shade the glare of the light.

At the first glance Mr. Pruhs saw that the faithful old man was dead and he at once gave the alarm to the other workmen who by that time had arrived and were knocking for admittance. The watchman's key was found in the or door. A telephone message was at one of the most faithful and trusted ce sent to the police station and employes of the institution. rear door. A telephone message was at Officers Andrew Smith and Johnston hastened to the scene. When Manager late home, H. M. Dinwoodey arrived he dispatched at 3 p. m.

Acting Coroner Morris Sommer was sent for and arrived about 8:30. After a brief investigation he decided that an inquest was unnecessary, and gave or-ders to have the dead man removed to his home. The body had not been changed from the cramped position in which it had fallen until Justice Sommer viewed it. The dead man's arms and hands were cramped under the chest, and a small knife had fallen from a pocket into the left hand. Above the left eye was a bruise caused by coming in contact with the floor. From all the circumstances in the case it is quite evident that Mr. Shep-pard was sick during the night and fell from the chair dead sometime after 5:20 this morning. The watchman is supposed to make his rounds of the entire building every hour and register at the main office by pushing an electric button on each floor. The annunciator showed that Sheppard had registered but twice up to 5:10 this morning. The last was made from the basement, where it is supposed he went for some hot water with which to take some composition. It is evident that he did not take the medicine, from the fact that the box had not been opened. It is the theory that he took a mounthful of water when seized by pain and fell to the floor, the water running out of his mouth. His lantern was on the desk, but was burned out when Pruhs discovered the body. It is believed that his death was caused by heart disease, from which he suffered for a long time. His death was a great shock to his wife and family and the employes at the store. It is said that during all the years he had been employed at Dinwoodey's, he has missed hardly a night, and was

OGDEN HONEYMOON BROUGHT TROUBLE.

Police in Omaha and Denver interfered with a very interesting honeymoon and caused a great deal of annoyance to a youthful married couple on what should have been the happiest journey of their lives.

Harry Quinn and his wife Clara Quinn, aged respectively 19 and 16 years, were married in Chicago a week ago yesterday. Already they have had time to taste the trials and tribulations of matrimony. They have been mixed up with the police in two cities and the petite bride says she "will hate the horrid policemen as long as she lives." After their marriage the couple de cided to visit Mr. Quinn's sister, J. A. Leonard, who resides in Ogden. Utah. They started on their journey with happy hearts, with no thought of the trouble that was in store for them. Their parents were with them at the Chicago station so they had no trouble there, but it began shortly after they got on the train. The couple look ever man conductor thought it very strange that two "kids" should be traveling to gether so intimately. He called the train conductor and together they questioned Mr. and Mrs. Quinn. They explained that they were married, and after much talk succeeded in convincing the train-men that they were telling the truth. When Omaha was reached, however, hey went out on the depot platform and met a burly knight of the brass buttons, who was not so easily con-vinced. He held the couple in the depotmatron's quarters while he tele-graphed back to Chicago. He received a favorable answer, and the couple were released with the "copper's" best wishes. The Quinns did not think to secure the telegram to avoid further trouble, so when they reached Denver on this morning's Rock Island train they encountered Depot Policeman

Clark said that they looked so young that he could not believe they were married. He telegraphed the Leonards in Ogden and the happy couple were again rleased with a note from Clark that will save them from further em-
